

Sep 2007: DTB's Engineering and Testing Services Division Acquires Test Systems

Due to increasing business activity levels, Test Systems is rejoining the Engineering and Test Lab Division at DTB, whereas previously it was part of the Manufacturing Division.

DTB management has made this decision mostly due to the fact that both divisions require very similar engineering skill sets from their respective employees. Instead of hiring multiple duplicate capabilities for both groups, we decided to join the two groups and pool resources.

Pooling of resources will allow for better servicing of the new jobs that we are taking on. Further it will allow DTB to be more competitive and responsive to you, our customer.

Over the next few weeks you will see changes to our website as we add information about Test Systems capabilities. Many of you may not have known that we design and produce some very complex Hydraulic, Pneumatic, and Electromechanical test and calibration stands. Our customers consider us to be at the very top of the industry in development and delivery of these turn-key systems.